MANILA – A team of students from the University of the Philippines College of Law won the 2015 Oxford Price Moot Court Competition in the United Kingdom.

In his Instagram account, UP Law professor Atty. Harry Roque, who served as the team's coach, posted a photo of the winning team.

"The champions in a unanimous decision: UP Law! Go Philippines!" Roque wrote in the photo's caption.

A member of the team, Pauline Gairanod, was also named Best Speaker of the competition.

The UP team was up against the Singapore Management University in the competition's final round.

The competition took place from March 24-27 in Oxford, England.

According to its website, the Price Media Law Moot Court Programme was established in order to foster an interest in international law governing freedom of expression issues.

It is focused on attracting and supporting students from developing countries or countries where freedom of expression is challenged.
