In a speech telecast live to Singapore, the Indian Prime Minister said there is a need to support local industrialists and provide international investors with relevant information on policies and approval processes.

NEW DELHI: India's new Prime Minister Narendra Modi has called on both local and foreign investors to believe that India is a land of opportunities. He said this in a "Make in India" campaign speech on Thursday (Sep 25). A live telecast of the speech was organised by the High Commission of India in Singapore and the Singapore Management University.

The Indian Prime Minister touched on the need to support local industrialists and to provide international investors with relevant information on policies and approval processes. He also spoke about changing the economic status of the people of India so that their purchasing power grows. For this to happen, Indians should be skilled in various sectors, Mr Modi said.

Said Mr Sathish Raman, the Confederation of Indian Industry's Southeast Asia Region's Director and head: "I think that is the biggest message he has given and he says that while, the world can come and make in India, he says the world can go back and export into the world."
