Headline: Singapore Management University and Lippo Group to Organize Industry Leaders Dialogue in Jakarta

Jakarta. Singapore Management University and Lippo Group will run a one-day industry leaders dialogue to discuss the future and potential of Asean's e-commerce, digital and supply chain industry at Hotel Aryaduta in Jakarta on Sept. 26, SMU president Arnoud De Meyer said in a statement on Wednesday (21/09).

The event will host Indonesian business leaders, members of the Singapore Chamber of Commerce in Indonesia and the Indonesian Chapter of SMU Alumni Association and will serve as an interactive platform for participants to exchange ideas about opportunities and trends.

A panel discussion will also feature a number of notable speakers, including MatahariMall.com chairman and Lippo Group director Emirsyah Satar; Venturra Capital managing partner, Stefan Jung; Sephora Digital Southeast Asia managing director, Alexis Horowitz-Burdick; and a keynote speech from SMU's Lee Kong Chian School of Business associate professor, Lim Yun Fong.

“SMU wants to contribute to the close collaboration in business, government and civic society between both countries by providing more opportunities for exchange and internships, strengthen our collaboration with partner Indonesian universities in research and postgraduate education, and foster more industry tie-ups with the private sector,” De Meyer said.

De Meyer believes that this will foster ties between the two countries and will help create and develop talent in both Singapore and Indonesia.

“We are very excited about the potential to digitally transform the Indonesian economy, connect our vast archipelago, empower hundreds of millions of people, and move Asean closer to its goal of integration,” Emirsyah said.
