

SMU, SUTD announce dual degree programme

Students will study engineering and business at both campuses in new course starting in May

By Sumita Sreedharan

Published: February 25

Archive/ Stock photo: Singapore Management University (SMU) Administration Building at Singapore Management University 81 Victoria Street Singapore 188065. TODAY Photo by KOH MUI FONG. MF211113. TODAY Photo by KOH MUI FONG. MF031013. [KEYWORDS: Special Projects; News; Editorial; Singapore; University; Study; School; Central Business District (CBD); Archive; Stock; 2013]

SINGAPORE — Students who want to study both engineering and business will now have the option to do so with the Singapore University of Technology and Design (SUTD) and Singapore Management University (SMU) announcing their dual degree programme in Technology and Management today (Feb 25).

This is the first time two local Universities have teamed up to offer a degree.

The course will start in May and applications for the 45 places begin today. Scholarships will be made available for to all 45 students.

Publication: TODAY Online

Date: 25 February 2014

Headline: SMU, SUTD announce dual degree programme

Students at the four-year course will have classes at both campuses and will go through a 16-week internship and Capstone programmes at both Universities.

Fees for the new course will be on par with that of SUTD and SMU.