

Publication: Singapore Business Review Online

Date: 16 February 2018

Headline: Singapore's most promising legal luminaries aged 40 and under

Singapore's most promising legal luminaries aged 40 and under

Find out who made the cut.

Now on its fourth year, Singapore Business Review's list of most influential lawyers aged 40 and under in 2017 puts together 20 legal luminaries at the top of their fields. The 20 lawyers in the list were selected from hundreds of nominees with specialisations ranging from disputes resolution and litigation, mergers and acquisitions, finance, and construction to intellectual property, copyright, media law, family law, and energy.

Read about lawyers advising multinational companies on billion-dollar mergers and acquisitions to legal elites diving head on into disputes, as well as advocates of pro bono work in family matters . These lawyers are arranged from youngest to the oldest.

12. John Tan, 33, Senior Associate, Withers KhattarWong

Publication: Singapore Business Review Online

Date: 16 February 2018

Headline: Singapore's most promising legal luminaries aged 40 and under

John's legal expertise is in the real estate sector, which includes advising on banking and finance and corporate real estate transactions. He has been involved in over 15 industrial building property deals in the past two years, representing vendors, purchasers, banks and investors.